CARD OF THANKS

I never knew how wonderful
A friend could really be—
Until that special hour when . .
You came to visit me.
When I was in the hospital.
Alone in my bare room,
Surrounded by an atmosphere
Of loneliness and gloom.
You did so much to cheer me up,
With just a word or two.
Indeed your very presence
My life an outlook new.
Your visit helped me more than all
The medicine I took.
And more than any greeting card,
Or magazine or book.
I thank you friend with all my heart
For gifts and cards and say this special prayer
That God bless you lovingly,
And keep you in His care.
Ethel Gardner.

About The Home

One leading fashion designer has described the look in women's clothes for this fall as "like a pearl in a shell." This statement is easier to understand when you know that the oval line is important. It is used in all types of clothes with success.

The main idea is to keep the convex shaping essentially slim and soft. The shaping starts now on the shoulders. Armholes are deeply set and fullness is to the back. Shoulders are rounded but always broad and soft.

The rounded feeling of the oval continues in coats and in jacket shapes —in collars and in fact, all details.

A reversed oval look is achieved by a bias seam and an intricate cut which gives a curved-in look that starts at the knees. Waists are small and supple. Skirts are narrow but always with ample walking room.

Luxury fabric and fur is big news Fur is being used on almost any type of garment this fall.

A new look in coats is called the slip-cover. There are the dinner slip-covers made of silk brocade and lined or trimmed with fur — the day slip-cover, made of waterproof fabric and the simple day-time slip-cover coat.

Leather is still a favored material for casual coats.

JUST ALLIGATORS

New Bern, N. C.- Albert Russell, State alcoholic beverage control board agent, was out poking around in a swampy area looking for moonshiners. Seeing a trail which looked as if it had been made by a boat, he cautiously guided his motorboat into the swamp grass. It wasn't moonshiners — it was just a mother alligator and her young ones. Russell retreated and so did the gators.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

High Blood Pressure

One of the most common causes of high blood pressure is arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries of the body. In other words, the blood vessels lose their elasticity.

Try to visualize the heart as an automatic pump, connected to a system of elastic tubes or blood vessels, which distribute the blood throughout the body.

The heart does not have to overwork as long as the tubes, or arteries, are resilient, and the blood pressure is normally low. If bye and bye the vessels gradually harden like old rubber, and cannot stretch to receive the oncoming blood, then the strokes of the heart or pump must become more powerful in order to send the blood along the hardened vessels. The blood pressure becomes high, and we say that the patient has hypertension.

High blood pressure is not a disease. It indicates that something is wrong in the body. In other words, it is only a symptom. This is a very common condition in individuals past forty or forty-five years of age. Particularly is this true in our country. The diseases that cause high blood pressure seem to be as old as recorded history.

Doctor Mortensen, of the Battle Creek Sanitorium, says that, in his experience with thousands of cases of arterial hypertension, the element of heredity plays the largest part. This is true in "approximately 70 to 75 per cent of the cases that we have studied. This means that one or both branches of the family have been afflicted with chornic Bright's disease, and in later years of life with apoplexy, together with coronary thrombosis," or other circulatory diseases.

The diseases mentioned above are becoming more common, and, as we have pointed out, a greater number of people are dying from such maladies than was ever known before.

The cause is found in our modern habits of living. Too much speed, over eating and excesses of various kinds also help.

It has long been known that worry and anxiety are deadly enemies of the human race. They not only bring much unhappiness into life, but they undermine the health, sap the energy and cause many thousands to fill untimely graves.

ROOSTER ATTACKS POSTMAN

Dallas, Texas.- Pity the poor postman! Added to his perils from mean dogs, Morris A. Johnson, 25, city carrier, was temporarily sidelined when he was spurred by an aggressive rooster. Johnson noticed the rooster near the mailbox, but paid no attention to him until the rooster attacked him, spurring him on the leg.

SNAKE CAUSES CRASH

Norman, Okla.- Mrs. Gladys Alberta Stemp, 37, was killed and her two children injured when Mrs. Stemp apparently lost control of the car. State Trooper Cy Killian said he found a dead snake in the wreck and it is believed that Mrs. Stemp became excited when she discovered it in the car.

The President has warned Congress against substantial tax cuts for small business or any other taxpayers before the next fiscal year.

Homemakers Items

Has your house become too small for your family?

This is a common problem, says Miss Mary B. Settle, house improvement specialist at VPI. As needs change with the expanding interests of children growing up, you may want a larger or second living room. Or your more urgent need may be another bedroom or two.

You may be looking or planning for a larger house. But first consider what you might do to satisfactorily enlarge your present house.

Miss Settle says the structural condition of any house, its plan or design, and even its location, must all be considered when deciding for or against enlargement. It is not sensible to spend good money building a good addition to a very poor house. But if the house is designed so additions can be easily and attractively added, if it is well located, and well built, it may be possible to meet housing needs by adding to or altering space.

For instance, you may have space enough under your present roof to finish off one, or even two rooms, and a bath. To use attic space, the first requirement is that the roof height or pitch be sufficient. An attic room should provide height for standing erect, or a ceiling at least 7 feet from the floor for a width of at least 8 feet. Additional floor space under a sloping ceiling will provide for furniture which needs less height, and will increase the room's usefulness.

The attic room must be accessible by a safe stairway. If stairs to the attic were installed when the house was built, the problem is already solved. But if new stairs must be provided, then enough space must be taken from the existing room space. If head room and stairway needs can be met, then you can plan for the rest of the project. Insulation, properly installed, will be needed for comfort. Walls must be constructed and finished. The floor joists may need reinforcement, and flooring must be laid and either finished or covered.

Closet space is essential for each room. Some built-in drawer or shelf space may be desirable, and a door to the unused attic area will provide for overflow storage. An extra window or two may also be needed for good light and ventilation.

Getting extra rooms by finishing off available attic space is often a practical and rewarding undertaking. For the "do-it-yourself" builder, it is a project which can be worked on whenever time or opportunity permits.

BABY DROWNS IN TUB

Soquel, Calif.- Mrs. Virginia Brown left her 18-month-old baby girl, Janice, in a high-chair while she checked a washing machine. When she returned, the baby had fallen from the chair and was face-down in the bathtub. Firemen were unable to revive the child.

ONE BIG FAMILY

Welesly, Mas.- When the George D. Noble, jr. family goes on vacation, it requires more than a family car. There are thirteen in the family — Mr. and Mrs. Noble and eleven children, ranging from 14 years to 9 months in age.

The U. S. discards the XC-99 as too costly.

Governor Stanley Threatens Drastic Crack-down As Highway Deaths Mount in Old Dominion

Richmond.- Governor Thomas B. Stanley today warned Virginia drivers that the constant and uninterrupted highway slaughter in the state demands the employment of stringent curbing methods, and that such will be placed in effect if early improvement is not noted.

Stating that many Virginia drivers apparently fail to realize that their licenses are not demandable rights but revocable privileges, Governor Stanley said, "I believe license suspensions and revocations to be one of the strongest practical deterrents to careless and reckless driving" and cited Division of Motor Vehicle statistics which showed that, during the past fiscal year, 25,057 licenses were revoked under the mandatory statutes for moving violations alone, in addition to those taken under prerogatives of judges. In addition there are nearly 140,000 people in the Commonwealth today with one conviction of speeding or reckless driving who will lose their licenses if convicted again for a similar violation occuring within 12 months of the first.

"Licetse suspension," he continued offers the means of placing the unsafe driver into a type of quarantine until he is fit to take the wheel again, but apparently too many drivers are escaping this until it is too late." He added further that the fact that one of every seven drivers in Virginia is convicted each year for a moving violation demonstrates an utter lack of cooperation and voluntary compliance which are so desirable. Despite this forceful action, he said, the death toll continues to mount.

Stressing that all possible was being accomplished on the official level to back the program, the Governor stated that the Division of Motor Vehicles constantly scrutinizes its conviction records to make certain that no second offender escapes and that twice a month it publishes a list, broken down by localities, of all persons who have lost their licenses, in order that local authorities might keep themselves informed. "The Code of Virginia provides strict penalties for those who are apprehended driving under revoked or suspended licenses," he said, "and there is no authority in Virgininia which can reduce or waive any revocation under the mandatory provisions."

Noting that the sole purpose of traffic laws is to ensure the safety of people using streets and highways, the Chief Executive advised that he was seriously considering instructing the State Police to employ unidentifiable patrol cars, using various colors and out-of-state license plates. "If our people refuse to cooperate and willfully ignore the safety of the public, as well as their own, we are compelled to employ drastic action to bring about compliance."

POST OFFICE WINDOWS NOW OPEN AT 8 A. M.

As of Monday, August 5, the Appomattox Post Office resumed opening of windows at 8:00 A. M. As the result of recent department orders, the windows had remained closed until 8:30 A. M. A number of protests over the late opening had been made, and an investigation disclosed that whereas a savings of 94 hours, amounting to $179.08, had been effected in the period between April 6 through June 28, 1957, due to closing the windows at 5:30 P. M. instead of 6:00 P. M., that there had been no savings effected by curtailing the morning window service. Therefore, the office at Appomattox was directed to resume the 8:00 A. M. window opening.

SAVINGS BOND SALES ONLY 38% OF QUOTA

With the year well over half gone, Appomattox County has reached only 38% of its quota of sales of U. S. Savings Bonds. During the month of July, only $3,918.75 sales were reported for E and H Bonds, with the total for the year at $41,802.75, towards a quota of $110,000.

Off-Variety Flue-Cured Leaf Disposal

Approval of special arrangements for handling certain stocks of flue-cured tobacco received under the price support program when the tobacco contains not more than one-third of limited support varieties was announced today by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Last December the Department announced that price support in [illegible]7 for producers of three less desirable varieties Coker 139, Coker 140, and Dixie Bright 244 would be at levels representing 50 per cent of the support rates for comparable grades of tobacco of other varieties. Department officials report that the discount program has been very effective. They estimate that not more than 1 per cent of 1957 flue-cured tobacco will be of the limited support varieties.

The special arrangement announced today is intended to aid those growers who inadvertently and unintentionally produced tobacco of mixed varieties. Under the plan such tobacco will be handled by the Flue-cured Tobacco Co-operative Stabilization Corporation as a separate pool under a supplement to its price support contract with the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Price support will be extended on this tobacco at the previously announced rate — 50 per cent of the rates for tobacco of other varieties. However, the tobacco will be packaged and offered for sale separately from other tobacco received by the Stabilization Corporation under the price support program.

The special pool of this mixed-planted tobacco will be sold as soon as practicable after the close of the season. Any net gain resulting from such sale after payments of the original price support advances plus actual packing and handling costs will be distributed by the Stabilization Corporation to the individual growers who consigned tobacco to the pool. It is expected that this special pool arrangement will permit an early distribution to the growers. Ordinarily, distribution of net gains is not made until after disposition of all of the tobacco of any crop year.

In making the announcement of the special plan, Department officials explained that mixed-planted tobacco containing limited percentages of the discount varieties should have a relatively higher value than crops consisting largely or entirely of these varieties. A special plan which has been authorized for handling this kind of mixed-planted tobacco will permit its sale more advantageously since it will be concentrated and offered in packed form.

Flue-cured tobacco is grown primarily in Virginia, North Caroline, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. Steps were taken at the beginning of the flue-cured marketing season in all these states to insure identification of the mixed-planted tobacco covered by the special pool plan.

DRY SPELL CONTINUES

An extended dry spell has caused crop damage in this area, and a tremendous loss on the current corn crop. Farmers are hoping for rains over the coming week-end, but about all it might do would be to relieve the danger to pastures and tobacco.

Abbitt Assails Federal Gov't Encroachment

Jamestown.- Representative Watkins M. Abbitt has characterized the growing Federal bureaucracy as a "huge Frankenstein monster whose power, if allowed to continue to grow, will gobble up its creators."

Speaking at a ceremony here on Monday, sponsored by Ruritan International, Abbitt assailed the growth of Federal activities and charged that there is a "creeping socialistic invasion of state and local power" and an attempt to "strike down the customs, habits, mores and traditions of our people."
